	on reference chart. At point (C) on the chart there was a naval facility at which there were gun emplacements for small caliber anti-aircraft guns.
3.	Stettin
-	Visiting this port noted no discrepancies with regard to navigational aid or hydrographic information between the chart and existing conditions. a number of submarines lying outside the entrance to Stettin from Swinemunde Reede and as many as 50 or 60 small naval craft lying inside the entrances for a distance of several miles. These craft appeared to be old and could be classified as subchasers, patrol craft, minecraft torpedo boats and miscellaneous grall craft. When entering nort these craft were on the port side of the Bulp, and on previous visits that they were never on the starboard side.
	While in Stattin more Soviet soldiers than in any other Satellite port, and assumed a large military post must be situated nearby. In addition, all influential positions in the city, both military and civilian, seemed to be held by Soviets. Soviet control over the population appeared to be atrong, and probably for this reason local people were largely unfriendly toward visiting seamen.

	All Soviet vessels of all types located in the Baltic Sea are based at four ports: Ventspils, Libau, Memel and Konigsberg (Kaliningrad). No merchant vessels are allowed within the limits of these ports, which have been marked in pencil and lebeled "Danger Areas".
